Burlington Police received a call that a man had threatened to come to the hospital with a gun for the purposes of seeing the mother of his yet to be born child. That expectant mother is in the custody of the Department of Corrections and was not allowed visitors. Police determined that the man was Bryan Poulin and that he had called the hospital talking about bringing people and ammo, to “put people down.”

Burlington officers took up positions in and around the hospital. At one point telephone contact was made between police and Poulin. He was subsequently located by Winooski PD in Winooski and transported to BPD.

Poulin was charged with Simple Assault in that he “attempted by physical menace to put another in fear of imminent serious bodily injury.” If convicted the punishment is not more than one year in jail or fined not more that $1,000.00 or both.
